

GOVERNOR IN LONG MESSAGE GIVES THE
REASONS FOR VETO

REAPPORTIONMENT BILL TURNED DOWN BY GOVERNOR MC GOVERN
CAUSE OF GERRYMANDERS IN MILWAUKEE AND
PEPIN COUNTIES.

LAWMAKERS RECALLED

Legislature Will Probably Reassemble
Monday to Pass Substitute Measure
Or Put Present Measure Through,
Passing It Over the Governor's Veto.

Madison, Wis., July 8.—The veto of the reapportionment bill, necessitating the recalling of the recently dismissed legislature, is said to indicate that Speaker Ingram and Gov. McGovern are in violent political disagreement.

As the bill left the legislature it was known to be to the precise liking of the speaker, who combined his forces with the social democrats of Milwaukee so that the socialist government of Milwaukee county in their interests and Ingram carried out a congressional district around Phipps community in the interests of his congressional ambitions.

Governor McGovern based his veto on the gerrymandering of Milwaukee county in the senate and assembly districts.

Measure Unfair.
[BY UNITED PRESS.]

The Governor refers to these charges in his veto and holds that the bill is an unfair one. The legislature will be called together Monday to frame and pass a substitute measure in case the present measure cannot be passed over the Governor's head.

The governor says that he believes that the bill is unconstitutional as well as unfair and in support of the former calls attention to certain districts in Milwaukee county, which county, in his opinion, does not conform with the constitutional requirements that the district must be reasonably compact and composed of contiguous territory. The veto message is a very long one.

La Crosse Company Finds Itself In Debt to Citizen Because He Has Used Water Supply.
[BY UNITED PRESS.]

La Crosse, July 8.—La Crosse has had trouble with its waterworks and had trouble collecting from water users but to find itself in debt to a citizen because he used the supply is the predicament in which the board of public works finds itself today.

One enterprising citizen turned his meter around instead of measuring the amount used the meter subtracts and, according to last reading, the water department owes him six dollars for three months use of water. The name of the citizen is being suppressed by the board.

CUBANS TO HONOR MAINE DEAD.
Prepare to Pay Tribute to Sailors Who Died on Battleship.

Washington, July 8.—Cuba is arranging to pay a tribute to the sailors whose lives were sacrificed in the destruction of the battleship Maine. President Gomez has issued a decree ordering a special demonstration of sympathy throughout the republic as soon as Havana harbor gives up the dead.

There is doubt, however, as to whether Cuba will be given an opportunity to make this sympathetic demonstration, as many army and navy officers believe that no bodies will be found in the present operation of one covering the wreck.

MISS BARRYMORE SEEKS DEGREE
Actress Said to Have Dispatched Papers in Suit Against Husband.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 8.—Ethel Barrymore, the actress, who is playing here, took steps to sue for divorce in New York from Russell Givens Colt, a young multi-millionaire, to whom she was married less than two years ago. The papers were taken out by a special agent and are to be filed immediately upon his arrival in New York. The grounds alleged are statutory and the name of a prominent New York society woman is brought into the complaint.

Speculator Reaches London From Italy
in Serious Condition.

London, July 8.—Staying at the Carlton is the chamberlain, James R. Keene, lately returned from Bordighera, where he has been in search of health. Keene refuses to see anyone.

Serious reports as to the condition of his health are in circulation. An intimate friend who saw him a few days ago, says Mr. Keene realizes he is in bad shape and has remarked that he wants to get back to America to die.

It is understood that he is suffering from an internal trouble.

BOARD OF REGENTS
FOR STATE NORMALS
TO IMPROVE SYSTEM

Courses of Study Will Be Revised So That Two Years Will Equal Freshman and Sophomore Year At University.

[BY SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., July 8.—The board of normal regents, at its annual meeting June 29 to July 1, entered on new and important work for the people and the public schools of the state. New departments were authorized, old ones strengthened, a few new teachers were employed, and many steps were taken to put new life into the normal school system to increase their usefulness to the schools of Wisconsin.

During the year ending June 30, 1911, a total of 905 diplomas and certificates were issued at the eight normal schools, this being an increase of 182 over the preceding year. The normal school system to increase their year will send out more than a thousand graduates, or about one-third of all the new teachers entering the schools of Wisconsin each year.

The 1911 legislature authorized the normal schools to offer the first two years of college and university work. This will enable a large number of students to do this work in or near their home cities and to save the expense of going away to Madison or to some other college town. The board of normal regents on July 1 went on record in favor of offering this work at each school next September.

A committee of the normal school presidents will work out a course which shall be the full equivalent of the freshman and sophomore years at the university. Prospective students for this course are advised to write to the presidents of the schools, which they expect to attend.

Washington, July 8.—Impeachment of Justice Wright of the supreme court of the District of Columbia was suggested today to the Senate "third degree" investigating committee by Samuel Gompers, Pres. of the American Federation of labor. Gompers' complaint was against Justice Wright's course in Bucks Stove Range Company's contempt proceedings against federation officials. Gompers also testified regarding detective work following the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building. He entered vigorous complaint against the manner of arrests of the McNamara brothers.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

San Francisco, July 8.—Disregard for the law is fast becoming an American characteristic, is the finding of the report made by the committee on teaching morals in public schools at the first session of the national council of education of the National Education Association. Robes, graft, the white slave trade, mobs, riots and lynchings are cited as instances of lawlessness.

To meet the situation the report says certain elemental virtues must be inculcated in the childhood of youth.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Santa Barbara, Calif., July 8.—In spite of the assertions of company officials and ship's officers to the contrary, passengers of the wrecked steamer Santa Rosa, who arrived here early today, after a thrilling battle with breakers that smashed the stranded ship, declare that more than four sailors lost their lives.

Supervisors say 192 passengers are all that are accounted for. There were 290 people on the steamer and many of the rescued declare the missing ones went down to death when the surf battered the lifeboats and rafts to pieces.

Many rescued women are still hysterical and under the care of physicians. Many passengers were wounded in demolition of ship's officers and crew.

FRANCIS MARION SMITH, A FARMER'S SON, NOW PRESIDENT OF A $200,000,000 CORPORATION.

A GREAT FINANCIER

Story of His Achievements Reads Like a Fairy Tale—Fortune Was Made From Desert Sands.

Between the humble surroundings and advantages of a modest farm home and the palatial residence of a money king lies a wide gap that few of us could hope to bridge by our own personal efforts and the story of a former Rock county youth who has succeeded in that achievement, reads for all the world like a fairy tale. How he threw down the reins of his father's farm team to grasp those that direct the great financial interests of a $200,000,000 corporation; how his youthful games on the farm gave place to international contests in which he captured the king's cup with his yacht, and how the modest conveyances of his old home were laid aside for a private car to transport him from one palatial home near the

TAFT TELLS ENDEAVORERS PEACE TREATY IS SURE

Negotiations Reach Point Where There Is No Doubt Great Britain Will Sign Agreement.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 8.—President Taft in a speech last night before the convention of the International Christian Endeavor association said that there was no doubt but that Great Britain would sign the arbitration treaty now being negotiated between that nation and this country.

"I am glad to say," said the president, "that today we have reached such a point in the negotiations for a treaty of universal arbitration with one of the great European powers that we can confidently predict the signing of a satisfactory treaty."

"The arbitration treaty heretofore with Great Britain and other countries has excepted from the causes which may be arbitrated those which involved the vital interests of either party or its honor. The treaty which we are closing with Great Britain eliminates these exceptions and provides that all questions of international concern of a justifiable character shall be submitted to the arbitration of an impartial tribunal."

The president expressed the hope that eventually half a dozen European countries may make similar treaties. Such action, he said, will not abolish war, but will furnish a forcible instrument in preventing it.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 8.—President Taft started on a cruise in the Mayflower, on which he was accompanied by Senators Penrose of Pennsylvania, Root of New York, Brown of Nebraska, Taylor of Tennessee, Foster of Louisiana, Bacon of Georgia, Overman of North Carolina, and Briggs of New Jersey, Major Butt and Private Secretary Hillis.

The president boarded the vessel at the navy yard, coming from the Christian Endeavor convention at Atlantic City.

The Mayflower is due at Washington on Monday.

What do you do to fill in pleasantly the time which you have on hand? It is to be expected that but few of us have much time, still, at odd times there should be some provision made to entertain the children and to provide amusement and pastime for the elder folks. DISEASE IS BAFFLED

Chiropractic Adjustments Build An Insurmountable Barrier

Every day brings its additional testimony for the science of Chiropractic.

Every day brings hope and health to the breast of some poor sufferers who have finally pinned their faith to Nature's way of restoring the body to its normal condition—Chiropractic Adjustments.

ARE YOU ONE TO GO LONGER IN IGNORANCE AND pain when there is at hand the only art, science, or philosophy which will return the body to its perfect state through the adjustment of the subluxated vertebrae—spinal bones.

The Useless Suffering of Humanity is Appalling. —The Road to Perfect Health Lies Within Your Grasp. Will You Seize It?

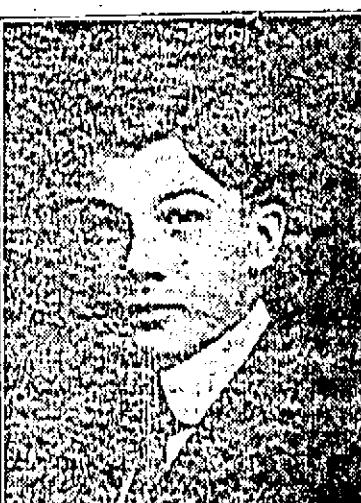

Like a great railway system with its branches running from the main line is the spinal column leading from the brain with its 31 pairs of nerve fibers passing through the various vertebrae, to the organs of the body. Subluxation (this means that the spinal bones lay one upon the other) the vertebrae crush down the cartilage which separates them and the nerve is pinched, shutting off life's impulses from the brain to that part of the body affected and disease results. The spine must be normal to permit of perfect health.

Chiropractic Science Deals With Cause, Not Effect

Chiropractic Adjustments as given by the graduate Chiropractor remove the cause of all disease. The Chiropractor can tell instantly if your spine is normal. Gallons of medicine will not move a spinal bone (vertebra)—it will ruin your system.

THIS WOMAN IS THANKFUL

To Whom It May Concern: I suffered for thirteen years, suffered as only women can appreciate, and one year ago my physician, after calling in another physician for consultation, told me that the only way to save my life was by an operation. I felt that I would rather die than submit to an operation, and hearing of the success which Puddicombe & Puddicombe were having in Chiropractic adjustments, was prevailed on to let them handle my case. Though doubtful at first, I must now say that they have brought about a perfectly normal condition, thus allowing nature to bring back my health, and I would advise any woman who suffers as I did to look no time in calling on Chiropractic and becoming well, as I do believe that this science is the most wonderful ever known. I will cheerfully answer any letter from suffering women who write me and enclose stamp. Mrs. L. S. Rose, R. R. No. 5, Rockford, Illinois.

GOOD FOR THE STOMACH.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

I am 50 years of age and for the past twelve years have been a constant sufferer from Nervousness, Constipation and Stomach Trouble.

During the time of my illness I have been treated with a great number of prominent physicians, have done with drugs, patent medicines, etc. From time to time I would get a little temporary relief, but every experience made me feel less and less hopeful of ever getting my health back. In the early part of last spring I was for seven weeks laid up and unable to work. I had read and heard from others of the work that the Chiropractors were doing but was skeptical about their claims being fulfilled. As a last resort I concluded to give them a trial. The result of that decision has been what I have so long sought, HEALTH. In less than a week after I submitted to the Chiropractic adjustments I was able to work and in three weeks' time was enjoying better health than for 12 years. I cannot too strongly recommend the Chiropractors and the wonderful curative value of the Chiropractic Science. E. W. PERLEY, 1222 Porter Ave.

This illustrates a perfect spine and any person having a spinal column like this could not possibly be sick, neither. In that form could they get into a condition that would bring illness upon them if they desired to. You will notice all of the different Vertebrae, the entire length of the spine and you will not find a subluxation. You will also notice that each of the Vertebrae, the arrows point to a few only, are in a normal condition and stand up in full shape.

Heart to Heart

Talks.

By EDWIE A. NYE.

RUM!

Ever see a fullback make a run with the ball?

It is an exciting spectacle.

The fellow runs in the face of many odds and tremendous opposition, but—

He runs.

He knows there is a bare chance,

and he takes that chance. He knows that other folks as knippy as spring

steel will tackle him. He may be tripped or knocked off his feet, piled upon my, but—

He holds the ball and runs.

See him dodge like a fox. Watch him circle around the others. Note how he twists and plunges hither and yond, but always, always with the hope of the touchdown before his eyes.

He runs like a streak. And if a dazzling tackle or the momentum of his clinging foe plunges him down he plunges down running.

Which is the way to win?

It is the way to win a touchdown in football and the way to win success in life.

Life is a tremendous game in which you must run the race that is set before you—a race wherein if you go down you must go down running.

It is against odds.

Rivals will trip you on the run if they can; competitors will clog your progress and tackle you high or low.

They want that ball, and they will get it if they can.

Run!

Touchdowns are rare, but they are possible. You may get to the goal, and if you do for you are plaudits of the crowd, the cheers of the multitude. If you go down, why—

The crowd will cheer your pluck and persistence, and you will extort admiration from your rivals.

Life is a strenuous game.

Today under the competitive system men struggle with each other as fiercely almost as did the gladiators in the arena at Rome and Coriath.

Therefore gird your loins.

Get into the game for all there is in you, for if you enter the lists panic striken and afraid it is easy to see your finish.

Get the ball and run.

Run as if your life depended upon your making your way through the opposing lines. Maybe your life does depend upon it.

CLINTON.

Clinton, July 8.—An article in the Milwaukee Sentinel of Monday, July 3, told of the promotion of W. J. Fitzgerald of Milwaukee to the position of assistant general agent of the Erie railroad from Milwaukee and will have charge of their Union Steamboat line. Mr. Fitzgerald is well known here, having married Miss Anna E.

Wyman of this place.

The Marble Booster published at Marble, Colorado, contains a lengthy account of the wedding of Mary Lavina Sharp to Thomas Joseph Boedey

at Glenwood Springs, June 27. Mrs.

Boedey is a granddaughter of the late

"Judge" Roberts of this place.

The same paper also contained an account of the marriage of Frances

Ida Randle to Arthur E. Johnson at the Secret of Happiness.

The secret of marital happiness is not always in letting a woman have it her own way, but in letting her have it without letting her know that you know that she's getting it.

Almost any man with ambition can saw wood cheerfully, when reward is assured at the close of the task, but it takes a hero to follow the plow

through the torrid heat of a July day

realizing that his work is for naught,

and that a fragment of a crop is all that can be secured.

The western half of Nebraska and Kansas look like a desert today because the hot winds which have swept over the land like a typhoon, and South Dakota is in about the same condition.

A farmer from the latter state is visiting his old home in Walworth.

His 400 acres of small grain has been ruined, during the past ten days, and he says, with pathetic cheerfulness:

"No harvest is waiting to hurry me."

That life is a lottery is generally recognized, and while seed time and harvest are promised, there are plenty of men this year who do not question

the seed time, but who have reason to be very skeptical concerning the harvest.

It is well for the nation that local failure does not mean national disaster, and while localities suffer loss and attendant hardship, as the result of ruin to crops, the tide of general prosperity is not retarded because the area is so large that the loss of a garden spot, here and there, is not noticeable.

* * *

The ability to work, as well as the opportunity, is seldom appreciated

while enjoyed, and not until disease, or the limitations of age interfere, do we fully recognize the great blessings which come through busy occupation.

The man who sits helplessly by the highway as the busy throng passes by may be rich in this world's goods, but he would give all his possessions for the physical strength and endurance of the man with the hoe.

It is a popular notion that people work because they are obliged to, and while in a sense this may be true, it represents only half the truth because work is a pleasure to every man and woman in normal condition, and without it they are most miserable.

When the first man was thrown out of the garden and commanded to go to work for his daily bread it was a bloody to the race, and the blessings which have followed as the result of

MAKE YOUR OWN FLY CHASER

There are on the market a lot of patent fly chasers. Just like most patent stuff, it costs you double money. We have sold different makes from one to two dollars a gallon, yet nothing does better work at any price than this: take one gallon of Cresodo and three gallons of common kerosene, mix as you want it to use, spray or put on with a brush. Keeps off flies, bats, gnats, is brushtastic, and costs about 45 cents a gallon instead of one dollar or more. Come in, talk to Mr. Pfenning, our Graduate Pharmacist and Chemist, about this or other stock remedies. He can save you half your money. Badger Drug Co., Milwaukee and River streets.

With several hundred calls to make each month, it is no small task and where it is necessary to make several return calls, the work is greatly increased. Food Expert Predicts Smokeless and Chewless Age in 15 Years.

Washington, July 8.—"Don't smoke. You might get sunstroke."

"Chewing has gone out of fashion. Our best people are not doing it this season."

"I predict that within fifteen years smoking and tobacco chewing in public will be obsolete."

These are the features of a statement made by Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, pure food expert of the bureau of chemistry. The statement was inspired by the heat wave.

"I am sure that no person could suffer from sunstroke who had not been a 'boozier' or a 'smoker,'" said Dr. Wiley.

LIGHT ON STABBING MYSTERY.

Divorced Wife of Son of Late Senator Hay Is Accused.

Hampton, Va., July 8.—The veil of mystery was partly lifted from the case of the mysterious stabbing of Charles Harvey Kersey of Washington and Alexandria by a woman near here Tuesday when it was reported that the woman is Mrs. Dora Hay, the divorced wife of a son of the late Senator of State, John Hay. This information came from usually reliable sources. Mrs. Hay had been a member of a camping party near Hampton for several days when the stabbing occurred during a game of cards. Jealously is said to have been the cause.

INTERURBAN READY FOR ITS NEW ROUTE

COMPANY ANNOUNCED THAT CARS WILL ENTER JANESEVILLE ON EAST SIDE OF RIVER SOON

CHANGE IS NECESSARY

Complaint of Residents on West Side Route Claiming Damage of Property Stated as Reason—Content for New Entrance.

Announcement has been made of the change of the route of entrances of the Beloit, Delavan Lake and Janeville Railway company, known as the Rockford & Interurban company, into this city. It is stated that the change will be accomplished as soon as a diamond switch is received for South Main street when the track on the east side of the river will be ready for use.

The tracks of the company on the west side of the river will cease to be used for interurban purposes, the reason given being that the property owners along the route claim that their property has been damaged on account of the interurban tracks. Since damage to one property would be the same to all, the company felt that they were not in a position to carry on a case which would involve a large financial outlay.

The change of route will be made before the tracks of the company are laid on North Main street. These will not be necessary for the operation of the cars on the east side of the river and will be put in later. The exact time at which traffic will be started on South Main street can not be definitely given, but will undoubtedly be in the near future.

The company's communication to the Mayor and Common Council of the City of Janeville is as follows:

To the Mayor and Common Council of the City of Janeville, Rock County, Wisconsin:

Gentlemen: This is to inform you that the Beloit, Delavan Lake and Janeville Railway Company, operating as the Rockford & Interurban Railway Company, will, as soon as the diamond switch or turnout is placed in position on South Main street, cease using its tracks for interurban purposes on the following named streets in the city of Janeville: South Jackson, South Franklin, North Franklin, Wall, High and West Buff Streets and that thereafter said company will operate its interurban service entirely on the east side of Rock River, over Eastern Avenue, Beloit Avenue and South and North Main Streets.

This change is made necessary by the hostile attitude of some of the people on the west side of the river owning property abutting on the streets mentioned, who claim that their property has been damaged by the presence of the interurban railway. They have instituted actions in court to perfect their claims. If these people are right in the contention that their property is damaged, all other people owning property along the line are damaged, and should be paid damages. To do this would involve a financial outlay by the railway company not warranted by the returns from the Janeville business. The abandonment of the tracks on the west side of the river for interurban purposes will not entirely relieve the company. It will still be liable for such damages as those who have begun actions may have sustained up to the time of such abandonment, the same to be determined by the award of commissioners.

Those owning property abutting on the streets mentioned on the east side of the river have, as a rule, given their written consent, waiving all damages, that this company may operate its interurban cars on the streets in front of their property. The business men on the east side have obtained these signatures.

Your conduct and attitude towards the Beloit, Delavan Lake & Janeville Railway Company have always been characterized by fairness and business foresight, and we trust your honorable body will appreciate our position in this matter. It is purely a business proposition.

THREE DRUNKS BROUGHT UP IN MUNICIPAL COURT

One Fined, One Given "Tie Pass" and the Other Was Sent to Jail for Seven Days.

Three men, all middle-aged or older, faced the judge in municipal court this morning on charges of drunkenness. The oldest of the trio was Emery Parks, a Civil War veteran, whose history with the Union Army, brought him into trouble with the police. Parks pleaded guilty and was given a fine of $3 and costs, which he made arrangements to pay.

Gilbert Olson, cobbler and furrier near Footville, wound up a protracted spruce which began up the Fourth of July in the cell in the lockup yesterday. The after effects were plain this morning. Olson pleaded to be allowed to leave town and was given an hour to do so. The man had no money and it was thought the walk might counteract the effects of the liquor.

Martin Stroben, another representative of the rural sections, who has been up before, was sentenced to the County jail for seven days in default of payment of a fine of three dollars and costs.

OAKLAND COMMISSION NAMES PERRY BROWN AS CITY ENGINEER

Former Janeville Resident Appointed City Superintendent of Streets and Engineer Under Commission Form.

Perry F. Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Brown, 409 East Milwaukee street, has been appointed to serve in the dual capacity of Superintendent of Streets and City Engineer ex-officio of the city of Oakland, Cal. The appointment was recently made by the Oakland commission and Mr. Brown is the first city engineer of that place under the commission form of city government, which has just been adopted there.

Brown has served as Assistant City Engineer at Oakland for a number of years, and his appointment comes as a reward for his faithful and untiring efforts in the city's engineering projects, which have included the building of a monster water front and harbor. The Oakland Tribune of last Sunday speaks of him as follows:

"Superintendent Brown is a man of the highest caliber, both as a technical expert and as an executive head of a department. Brown is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, and B. S. in the College of Engineering, and was conferred upon him in 1897. For two years he served as city engineer in the city of Janeville, Wisconsin, and resigned that position to become engineer in charge of the Bear River dam in California. Since that time during a period of nine years he has been principal assistant to Turner in the city engineer's office. In 1908 he was honored with membership in the American Society of Civil Engineers, eligibility to which is conditional upon a record of ten years or more responsible engineering of a meritorious character."

The San Francisco Call of last Sunday also mentioned his appointment and ran a single column cut. Mr. Brown's position is a most important one as Oakland is a rapidly growing city and has several important engineering projects. He will receive a salary of $3,000.

Mr. Brown has a large circle of friends in Janeville, his former home. They will be pleased to learn of his advancement to such a responsible position.

RECORD-MAKING RIDE UP MOUNTAIN SIDE

Former Janeville Residents Take Exciting Automobile Ride up Side of Colorado Mountain.

Two former residents of Janeville, Dr. L. G. Croddy and Raymond Brown, were participants recently in one of the most difficult and exciting auto trips ever made, and helped in the establishing of an auto record. The trip was up the steep rock mountain road to Ouray in Colorado, to the Red Mountain. The road up which the party made the ascent is one of the most picturesque and difficult in the world, rising 3,000 feet in 12 miles, an average of about 200 feet to the mile.

The party left Ouray at 12:00 o'clock and, making a stop of half an hour en route, were in Red Mountain at 2:30. Mr. Walker, editor of the Ouray Phaindicator, who was one of the four passengers, describes the trip in a most graphic manner.

The trip from Ouray to Red Mountain certainly made history in automobile and added a striking and wonderful proof to the fact that the triumph of automobiles over any kind of roads is a thing of the very near future.

"It was a trip that few believed would ever be accomplished along the steep roadways cut out of the solid rock, just wide enough for a team or automobile to move along with the mountains rising to sheer heights on one side and the other edge of the road bordering the great canyon depths.

"It is the first time an auto ever reached that town by its own power and the first one to climb to the crest of the range from the Ouray side.

"About four o'clock the return trip was begun and at six the party was back in Ouray after one of the most exhilarating, thrilling, unusual and stirring trips that could be imagined, having conquered one of the earth's most noted mountain drives.

HE NEVER DONE THAT BEFORE.

THE LAZY MAN.

He tried so hard to stay awake—
His efforts were in vain;
A little nap he still would take
And soon would doze again.

His eyes enormous were to see,
His languor was intense,
That poor chap lacked the energy
To sit upon a fence.

The balance there he could not keep,
Without some effort made.
So stretched him where the grass was deep
And slumbered in the shade.

Unexpected Meeting.

Charles Dickens, taking one of his accustomed strolls in shadow land, suddenly met Mr. Podsnap face to face.

"My dear Podsnap," he said, with a beaming smile, "this is indeed—
But Mr. Podsnap impatiently waved him aside and passed on.

"Well," reflected Dickens, momentarily chagrined, "that hurts a little—but he's living up to the reputation I gave him, anyhow."

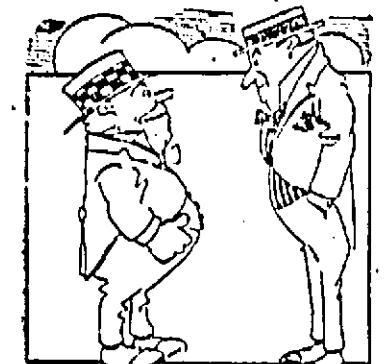

HE—" What would you say if I kissed you?"
SHE—" If you kiss me the way most fellows do, I couldn't speak."

him to the police station?"
"No—the hospital!"

WHY DISCHARGED.

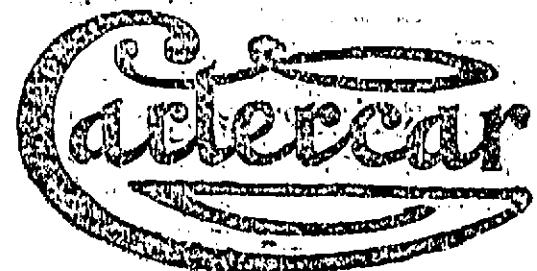

SEERS—" Oh, his additions were proper enough; but his subtractions were most scandalously improper."

TROUBLE SAVED.

THE FARMER—" Nope, I need a scarecrow anyway."

K-R-I-T

The Practical Car For Practical Purposes

Wisconsin likes the K-R-I-T, therefore the K-R-I-T has come to Wisconsin. A car that gives More Power, is Simplicity itself, has style and room, that costs less to buy, and last but not least—less to keep up.

The K-R-I-T gives you a dollar's worth of automobile for every dollar's worth of price. Even the specifications will tell you what a splendid value the K-R-I-T car is for the money—but a personal demonstration tomorrow will lift your enthusiasm to the bubbling-over point.

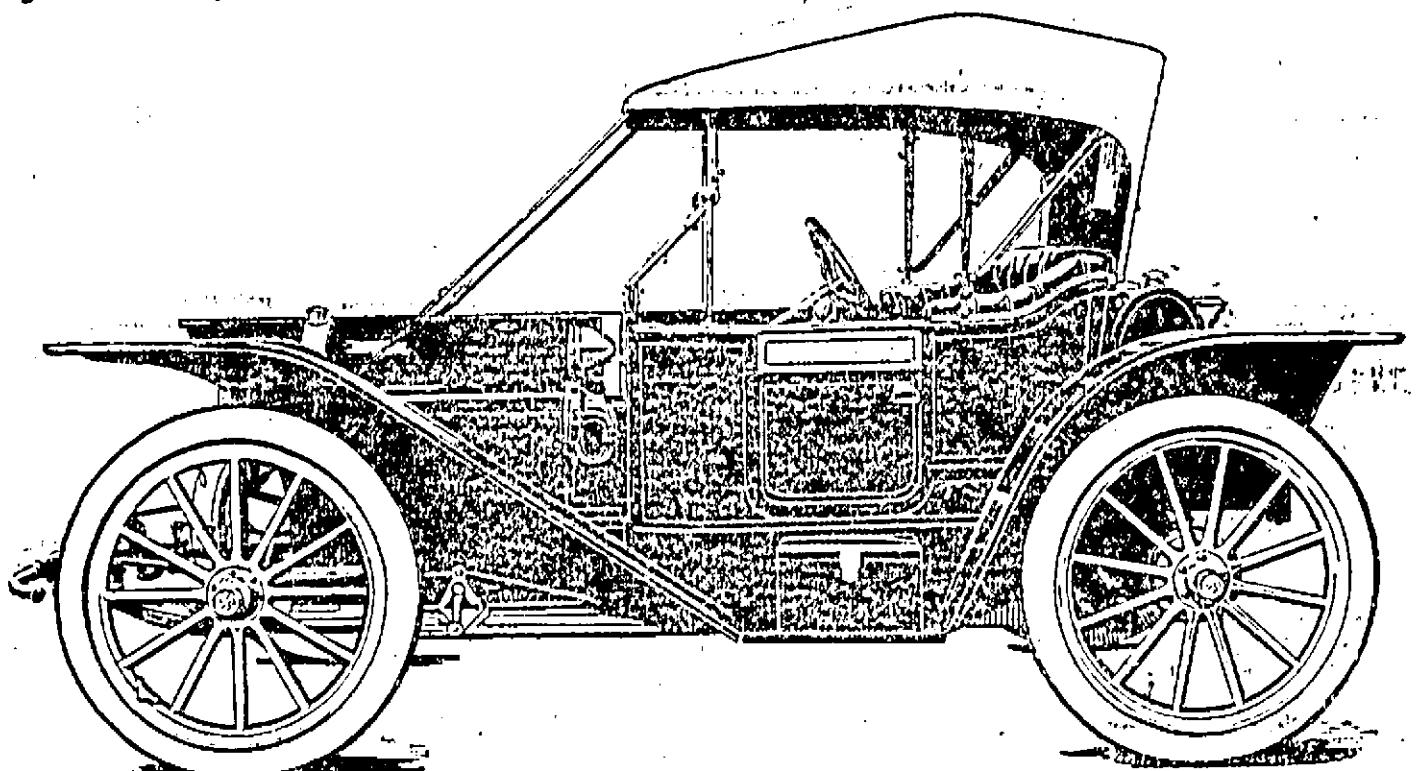

The K-R-I-T is the first low-priced car in the world to have a ball-bearing motor—same as you find in the highly-developed, expensive foreign made machines. Ball-bearings are used for crankshaft bearings, for transmission bearings. They cost more than plain bearings but they eliminate friction, save repairs, save lubrication, and are practically indestructible.

The motor is one of the quietest, and smoothest ever put in a car. All power goes to driving the rear wheels through a shaft drive. It is a pleasure to sit behind a K-R-I-T steering wheel and hear the low hum of the motor as you skim along the roads.

The K-R-I-T driver fears no hills or sand—they're easy for the K-R-I-T

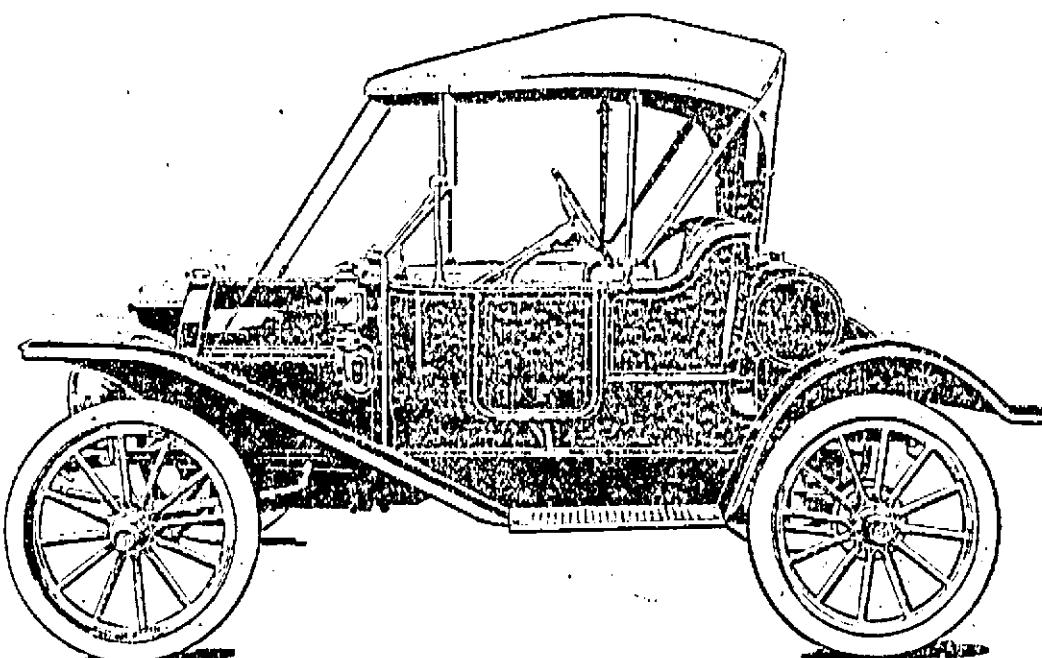

Simplicity and strength are the keynotes of K-R-I-T construction throughout. The motor carries no water pump, for cooling is by the highly efficient thermo-syphon system; it has no complications of commutator, battery or coil—ignition is by magneto with fixed sparks.

The clutch is multiple disc, self-adjusting and smooth and easy in its action. The K-R-I-T has surplus power, surplus braking surface and surplus cooling surface. The K-R-I-T is in a class by itself.

AT PAILLARD'S

By Montague Glass

WHAT is Paillard's? An oasis in the desert; a bit of Paris transplanted between two skyscrapers, a haven for the weary and an infallible remedy for the nostalgic Frenchman. Broadway swirls at its very doors; through its open windows in the summer comes the wailing cry of the newsboy, the clang of the trolley going, the automobile horn and sometimes a warning scream from the engine-house around the corner. But these are far away once you enter its portals, for this is France.

At half-past five, Paillard's is crowded to its doors, for this is the hour of the antepandial absinthe and your true Parisian must have an aperitif or go dinnerless. So there they sit, hatted or hatless, in chattering groups, and watch the little droplets tick-tock with clock-like regularity until their goblets are full of the milky, iridescent fluid that meets their appetites for the meal to follow.

Then there is the pompiers, a mild thirst quencher composed of—but you shall learn for yourselves.

It was a cold day without, and a dry, fine snow fell and was scattered by a teeth-chattering wind—a freezing blast that huddled you into your overcoat and almost swept you past the revolving door. With a great effort you ducked under the hood of the porte-cochere, inserted yourself in a division of the door and a polite attendant whirled you into the thick of things.

What grateful warmth! What a faint aromatic smell of cigarettes, coffee and a hundred liqueurs and beverages! So you, or rather I, sank with a sigh of relief in the divan and Jacques, the waiter saw me from the vantage of the cashier's desk and nodded reassuringly. Another moment and a demitasse of coffee steamed in front of me. And now I felt warm. A faint moisture of sheer luxury stood on my forehead.

"Dis, done!" I crooked my fingers at Jacques.

"Pompiers," he murmured and hastened away.

Then enters the man with the whiskers. There are plenty of men with whiskers, with beards of such amplitude that you are constrained to wonder how they care for them, endure them, or better still, if they are married men, how their wives endure them.

And so the wearer of these perfect furies of whiskers—these bushy, thorny, turbulent whiskers—entered Paillard's and, with a smile that I deduced from divers movements of his beard, sat himself down at my table.

"What a day!" he said, shaking his head.

"What a land!" he continued.

I nodded and wagged by turns.

Then came Jacques with my pompiers, and the man with whiskers lay back in his circular seat and roared with merriment.

You fortify yourself against snow with ice," he said; "but in this country one does strange things, what?"

He turned to Jacques.

"Bring me one, too," he said.

Then Jacques returned, bottle-laden and alert,

Three bottles and a siphon. He placed them carefully on the table, first a tall slope-necked bottle on the one side, so; next a bulging-necked black bottle on the other side, so. Then take the first bottle and pour into the bottom of a goblet a generous modicum. That's vermouth—vermifuge—tart and aromatic. Then from the other bottle, pour much or little, as you have a sweet tooth or not. That's cassis, sugary and thick, a liqueur made of black currants. Now drop in your ice, two cubes, and fill it up with carbonic water from the siphon. Stir vigorously, with the spoon and v'là—there's your pompiers!

"Delicious!" said the man with the whiskers.

"Most refreshing."

He smacked his lips and plied his serviette roughly, across, through, up and along his beard and moustache until they had assumed the proper degree of ferocity. Then he pulled from his pocket that unmistakable badge of the tourist, a Cook circular ticket.

"Voilà, m'sieu!" he continued, "in this country everything is big, your railroad tickets, for instance. I travel to Cincinnati and return. They sell me a ticket, a whole volume when folded, a telescope unfolded. It is immense. It is gigantic. So also are your high buildings. I go to the top of one and feel that I must jump. I must throw myself over the parapet. It is astonishing, but, mind you," he paused to run a white hand through his hair, "very amusing; no less, m'sieu, than that; very amusing."

"It is fortunate that you resisted the impulse," I said.

"Fortunate!" he exclaimed, and burst into a loud laugh. "I have had my lesson fifteen years ago. All my life, m'sieu, I have been subject to such impulses. I see in the street a pretty girl, very pretty. Do I kiss her? I want to, I admit, but I deny myself. What? Of course I deny myself. It is unlawful and leads to complications."

He seized his chair on the sides by both hands and jerked it nearer the table.

"I'll tell you something," he went on, confidentially, "about myself, about that lesson fifteen years ago. I was then twenty-five, a dangerous age and full of fire. The wine of youth flows in one's veins. All is impulse, but of reason and wisdom, very little. So fifteen years ago I am a young man twenty-five—eh?—accustomed to indulging my every want and very happy to do so, m'sieu! I assure you,

"No regrets, no, not one, just every day to drink my fill of wine, to gamble and to take pleasure in feminine society. I was, to confess candidly, m'sieu, a dissipated young dog."

"Well, in this way I spent my time till at last there happened the inevitable. My nerves, none too strong at their best, m'sieu, gave out, and I retired to the residence of my uncle at La Voulte. The village of La Voulte is to be compared to New York or Paris, no, not for a moment; merely a village, that's all. But in La Voulte there are convents and churches, m'sieu, I assure you, in plenty.

"The good sisters, in the robes of their order, are everywhere, take plenty of exercise by direction of my physician, and so in walking I meet these nuns, m'sieu, wherever I go, I turn a street corner—there, face to face, is a good sister.

"La Voulte, m'sieu, is a healthy climate—fine peaches, magnificent vineyards. The wine of La Voulte is of bouquet the most delicate. Yes, m'sieu, everybody drinks wine in La Voulte, even the sisters, and everybody has a fine complexion and plump red cheeks.

"So I walk around La Voulte and encounter the sisters. Their faces are bound in white linen and long black veils fall from their heads to their feet.

"M'sieu, every time I see a sister I say to myself, 'What a droll thing, what a situation it would be, should I take my fist so, and with the index finger crooked so, chuck ever so gently the plump chin of that good sister, right underneath where it emerges from its snowy linen bandage.'

"Understand me, I am sane—quite sane, m'sieu, at this time; but there is some defect of the will. So the thought preys on me continually, and I say nothing about it to anybody. At last I can stand it no longer. I will return to Paris, where there is life and the distraction of the boulevards and the theatres.

"I dare not trust myself outside the house, m'sieu. I assure you for fear I offset this trivial, this altogether silly and unnecessary affront to the good sisters. Finally I take my portmanteau and am encased in a first-class compartment labeled for Paris, when the door opens and in comes a rel-

"m'sieu", I assure you, I tremble like—a leaf, m'sieu, like a leaf and close my eyes. I need not open them to see those white hands, that dimpled chin, those ruddy, tempting cheeks. All these I see with my eyes closed, m'sieu, for I had caught a glimpse of her long black veil as she entered.

"Picture to yourself, m'sieu, the situation. There I sit and opposite me the good sister. I keep my eyes tightly closed and listen. She has been eating the sausage and drinking the good wine of La Voulte, m'sieu, and though the meal is long past, she makes little sounds with her lips as if she relishes it anew.

"Yes, m'sieu, I listen, and to me it is maddening; it is the quintessence of irritation. For fifteen minutes she continues these sounds, and I, m'sieu, I feel that I simply must look just once, to see how she does it. Yet I know that if I but open my eyes, I am lost. So I struggle inwardly and perspire, m'sieu. I assure you, I am wet through and through, yes, through and through I am filled with trepidation."

"But at last I can stand it no longer and so I open my eyes. Ah! I take one look and then, m'sieu, clutching my fist so, and crooking my index finger so, I chuck that good sister violently, m'sieu, with all the force of pent up energy, under her dimpled chin."

"He learned back in his chair and laughed until in sympathy.

"The point is not yet," he continued, again scrubbing his beard with his serviette. "The point is indeed not yet, m'sieu."

He paused and laughed once more.

"That black veil, m'sieu, it is not the gash of a religieuse. A—oh, no," he went on. "It is the mourning veil. Yes, m'sieu, she is a widow. What do you think of that? A widow, yes, m'sieu, and it cost me two thousand francs before I was through with her. An expensive indulgence, what?" he said, struggling into his overcoat with Jacques' assistance. "But I learned my lesson, m'sieu. I now have my impulses well in hand and so I wish you good evening."

He turned to leave and then, as an afterthought, wheeled and made a deep obeisance.

"M'sieu," he murmured.

"I rose and bowed in return.

"Au revoir," I replied, and in a minute the revolving door had him in its clutches and swung him out into the blustering night.

The REO Is "All There"

Whatever test you apply to the REO you'll find it "all there." It has all the qualities you want in a motor car.

HILL CLIMBING—You want a car that will take grades without much let-up of speed, and the best test of that is mountain climbing.

The REO (the same car, by the way, that went from New York to San Francisco in 10 1/2 days) climbed to the top of Mt. Hamilton in California—a distance of 24 1/2 miles in 65 minutes, beating the former world's record by 10 minutes.

RACING—You may not want to go over sandy roads at 52 miles an hour; but you do want a car with the power and ability that this speed implies.

On October 18, 1910, the REO raced over a very sandy 50-mile road with a higher priced car well known for its racing record and beat it by more than 10 miles. REO time, 57 minutes 43 seconds.

ENDURANCE AND RELIABILITY—You don't want to turn your pleasure jaunts into tests of endurance; but you want proof that your car will stand more strain than you will ever put it to.

In the New York to Atlanta run of 1910, the REO finished in perfect condition and challenged every other car, regardless of price, to a technical examination. There were no "takers."

In August, 1910, the REO went from New York to San Francisco in 10 days, 15 hours and 30 minutes, without a wrench being touched to its engine.

COMFORT—Apply that test yourself. Let us take you out for a spin in a REO over any kind of road you may choose around here.

How To Make An Automobile Valuation

DETERMINING the value of an automobile is exactly like finding out the worth of any other staple article of necessity, the real value of which you do not feel capable of passing judgment on yourself. If you wanted a new heating system installed in your home, your first move would be to write severable responsible concerns and invite them to make bids. These bids you would analyze and see exactly what each firm offered and at what price. You would check each list of specifications—one against the other. If all the propositions specified about the same standard equipment, but varied in price, you naturally would give the job to the lowest bidder. Having satisfied yourself as to quality it would come right down to matter of dollars and cents.

Analyze an automobile in the same way. It's merely a case of simple comparisons. Merely a case of seeing what is offered you at a given price—just a simple checking up of the specifications—of finding out something about the concern that made the car—whether or not they are large manufacturers or just assemblers—whether or not many of their cars are in use—if so how many? And get some facts about the car's record, about its ability to "stand up." In other words, put the facts of one car against the other, and then you can determine for yourself which is the best to buy at a given price.

A comparison of the Overland Model 52, at $1600 with any $2500 car on the market will show you how sixteen hundred dollars will go as far as twenty-five hundred. Just take the specifications of any $2500 car. Start with the wheel base and go on through with the motor—horse power—size of wheels—transmission—trimmings, etc. Check up the whole equipment and see if the $1600 Overland won't balance with the $2500 machine. A car should not be judged by its price. It's the worth of the car you are paying for—the actual facts determine its intrinsic value. Facts are the only things you can base your valuation on.

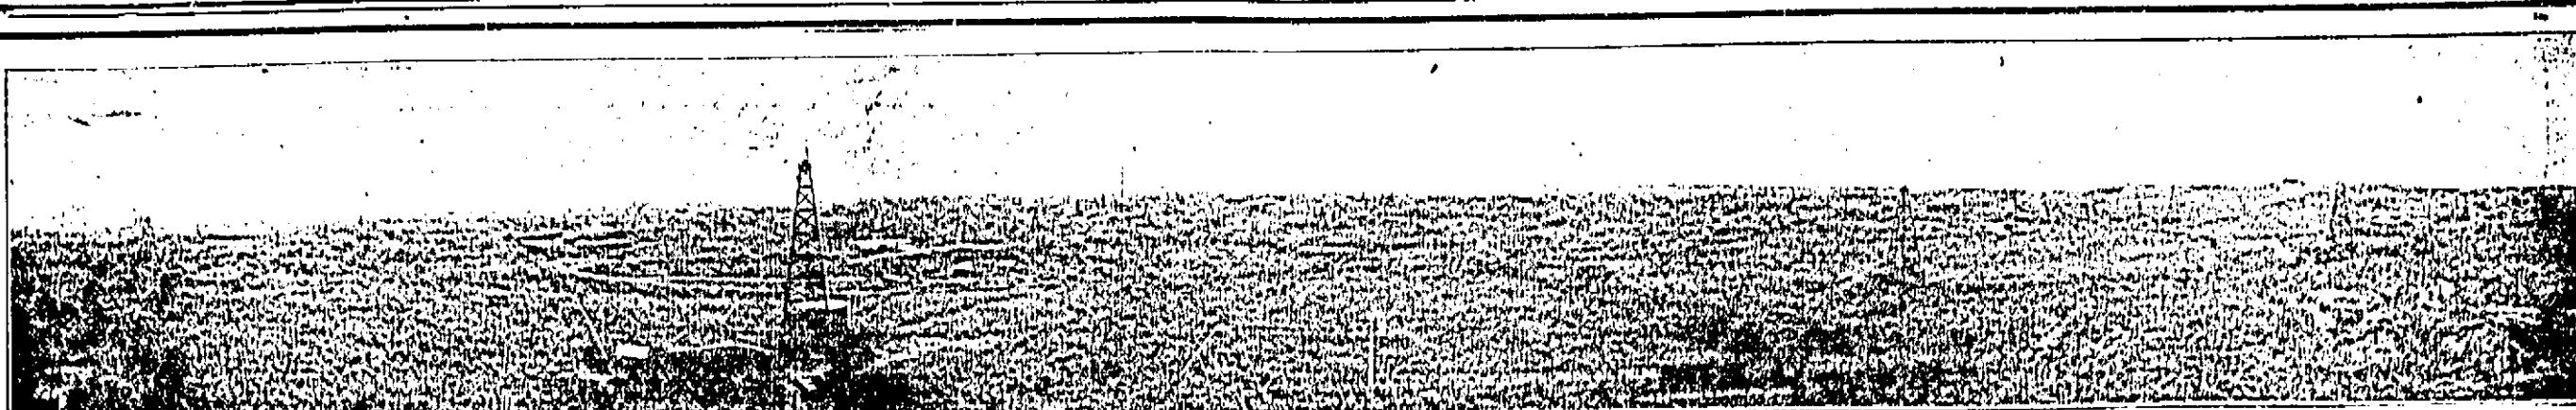

Model 52—Fore Doors—Wheel Base 118 Inch—5-Passenger—10 H. P.—4-Cylinder—Motor—Tires 34x4. Price, $1600.

A Few Facts Regarding Oklahoma and the Glenpool Oil Fields in Particular

Where not so many years ago the wolf and prairie dog held undisputed possession and were seldom disturbed except by an occasional "Cow Puncher" riding the range after wandering droves of cattle; while today on these same spots are towns of thousands of people with railroads, industrial plants, schools, churches, banks, municipal water and lighting systems, many handsome business houses and hundreds of elegant residences that would do credit to much larger cities, and the cowboys' lonesome range has been converted into broad fields of grain and cotton. This natural and inevitable development of the country has promoted and built thousands of good towns, and within this period lands have increased in value from 200 to 2000 per cent, and in many instances much more.

Oklahoma City, the metropolis, had its humble beginning in the year of 1889, from which time it has enjoyed a steady growth, until today its population numbers over 105,000 inhabitants.

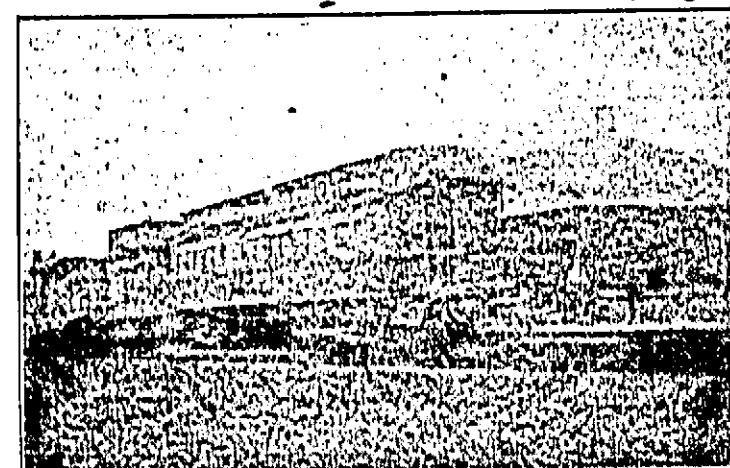

Among other large industries, the Schwartzschild & Sulzberger and Morris & Co., packing companies, have invested over $8,500,000.00 in equipping two of the most modern and up-to-date packing plants in the United States.

Within the boundaries of this great State are numerous other cities whose growth has been equally as phenomenal, ranging population of from 10,000 to 50,000 each.

In the year of 1907, a poor farmer, while drilling for Artesian water, struck gushing oil, and within a very few hours this section, or the Glenpool Oil fields, became prominent in every part of the civilized world, and today is acknowledged the greatest and largest producing oil fields.

Within a radius of four miles square, comprising the Glenpool field, has been invested millions of dollars in oil wells, storage tanks, etc., $68,000,000.00 having been invested in pipe lines alone, conveying the oil through eight-inch pipes from this field to different points from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, the largest pumping plant in the world being located here.

This field is on the main line of the St. L. & S. F. and the Midland Valley R. R. &c.

Beautiful arms and shoulders are a possession of which any woman may be proud. They are sufficiently rare to be also a mark of distinction.

The effort to beautify the shoulders and arms must include exercise as the first requisite. One cannot round out angular shoulders and develop thin arms into symmetrical proportions without properly developing the muscles. Massage and the application of nourishing creams will be helpful, but without exercise to develop the muscles, beautiful arms are an impossibility.

There are many kinds of exercise which are suitable for the purpose, and fortunately some of these are the very ones to be found in the vacation "stunts" which all healthy girls enjoy. An exercise undertaken for the pleasure one gets from it, will do more good in less time than an exercise carried on for the sole purpose of developing a certain set of muscles. An object other than the beneficial results expected will add a zest which increases the value of the exercise.

Among the summer pleasures, there is none more valuable than rowing for the woman or girl who desires prettily rounded arms. The movements necessary to propel a boat bring into play all of the muscles of the arms, wrists, hands, shoulders and chest. Even the muscles of the neck receive exercise and rowing will build up a scrawny throat with surprising rapidity. An hour's exercise with the oars every day, will work wonders for the flat-chested woman and will round out the bust and increase the chest measurement.

Swimming is another excellent method for developing the arm and shoulder muscles. In fact the muscles of the entire body are brought into play and strengthened, but the benefit to the arms and shoulders especially is very marked.

One of the peculiar features of muscular exercise is its apparently paradoxical quality. The woman whose arms are shapeless from lack of flesh, and the other woman whose arms are also shapeless, but from too much flesh, will both receive benefit from the same exercise. The excess of fat which makes the arms bulky and consequently unbeautiful, will be worn away by exactly the same pro-

Vacation Chats.

A Roof-Garden Vacation.

If you can't have the vacation you want, get all the fun possible out of the vacation you can have, is the philosophy of a certain family who secured a lot of vacation enjoyment last summer in an unexpected fashion.

The family lived in the ordinary small house of a large city. They were all wage-earners except the small children. Their salaries were quite modest and there wasn't much left over at the end of the week.

Unfortunately, none of them worked for firms who gave them two weeks' vacation with salary thrown in. They had to pay for their own vacations, and when each looked at the small amount he had left when the vacations were deducted, the sum for a holiday was exceedingly small; so small that any sort of holiday was really out of the question.

But they were a happy lot, and they didn't grumble over long. The idea struck some of them to put all the vacation money together and see if something enjoyable couldn't be secured for it. They did this and set to work thinking of the best way to use it. The result was a roof-garden, where the whole family had a vacation.

They put strong railings around the roof so that there was no danger of falling off. They bought some inexpensive, easy chairs that would stand the weather. They fixed up garden boxes and pretty plants, until the roof was quite transformed. Sometimes, in the cool of the morning, they took breakfast there, for breakfast was a simple meal. Quite frequently, they had a little supper there, and all sorts of picnics and jolly lounging times were enjoyed in this outdoor room. It was much cooler than the house, the air was better, and before the summer was over, the family almost lived there.

By thus combining their scanty funds, pleasure and change were provided for the whole family; whereas, no one member on her own savings could have had a vacation of any value. The novelty of it, the meals out of doors, the outdoors life generally—all were good for the family; in fact, really more helpful than a few days spent elsewhere. For they enjoyed this for months, whereas the usual vacation would have been but for a few days or a week. And the money was not gone entirely, for many of the things purchased could be used for the same purpose another summer.

Such a vacation is, of course, not practicable for every one. But the thought back of it is that of turning to account the resources at hand. Many think that if they cannot go somewhere, either on a trip, or to a resort, or the country to board, they cannot have a vacation. But perhaps a very enjoyable vacation is awaiting them in the backyard, or in the woods on the outskirts of their town, or on the banks of the little river that turns the wheels of the mill in which they work.

Cordiality.

Cordiality is a quality which can be cultivated, and there is no one thing which makes so much difference in our friendships as the lack of it.

How we do admire a sincere, cordial friend, one who is always the same, dependable, and meets us in the friendly spirit of all times.

Such a friend is always there, when needed; one knows what to expect from him and is never disappointed. We may be what we wish to seem, by practice and of course in this, as in all other virtues, growth comes by exercise.

When entertaining our friends the fact that we are welcome and enjoyed means more to us as guests than elaborate display or fine cooking.

"A dinner of herbs where love is, is better than a stalled ox," if love is not.

Simple entertainment is becoming sensibly stylish, the thing to do, one style which most of us are willing to recognize.

The people who can entertain their friends simply and often, not trying to impress those who can afford more costly entertainment, are justly the popular people of today.

A well arranged table, beautiful linen, well laundered, is one of the first essentials; a simple little centerpiece of some kind, on which to place the vase or fern dish, gives an air to an otherwise commonplace table.

In choosing dishes, the plain, or ivory colored ware is serviceable and easily replaced if broken; then too, white ware goes well with any color scheme.

Let the glass and silver be rubbed bright and glistening, and this will be sufficient preparation of the entertainment of any guest.

A great variety of foods are not good form, or many courses are was formerly thought a necessity. A few well prepared dishes, daintily served, will make a feast fit to set before the king.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON.

A S A CONTRIBUTION for the unusual-occupations-for-women column, a reader has sent in the following suggestive little story of her experience.

She had been ill for two or three days with bronchitis, not ill enough to afford a trained nurse, but decidedly sick enough to need to go to bed and stay there.

Her husband had been trying to do the housework, take care of her and attend to his business with the usual nerve-racking results for both patient and nurse!

Someone told him of a Miss Blank, saying: "Telephone Miss Blank to go to your house—she is a mighty nice girl. She isn't a servant, and, of course, you can't expect her to do the heavy work, but she will be at times there and is just the one to help you. She is such a good, sensible, sympathetic, wholesome girl."

"Miss Blank was promptly telephoned and promptly came. She first asked me to please go right to bed and helped me there. Quietly and quickly she returned to me with the hot-water bag, then she sponged my face with warm water and alcohol. Then she brushed my hair ever so gently and after making me comfortable with a handkerchief, a drink and adjusting the shade, she tucked the rest of the house.

"In a little while she advised me that we needed eggs and coffee and other food. (Why is it everything runs out when you are ill?) so she went out and purchased supplies for me. On her return she got me the daintiest lunch, tea that WAS tea, and delicious poached eggs.

"At three o'clock she came to me dressed and ready to leave. Even though I longed to have her come the following day, I must think of the financial end of it, as my husband received only a small salary. So I told her how grateful I was, told her I did so much want her to come again, but stated frankly that we had to be careful of the pennies.

"She smiled and said: "Well, my prices vary—depend not only on the length of time and the amount of work necessary to be done, but on the circumstances of those I serve. You know, I do all sorts of filling in. For instance, this evening at seven o'clock I visit a Mrs. Earle's apartment while she is at the theatre to watch over her two children. They will be asleep, and in all probability will remain so until her return, but should there be a fire or should one of them be taken ill Mrs. Earle knows I would not lose my head, wherein a servant—well, Mrs. Earle says she believes the servants leave soon after she does. Some of them, it is true, only go out on the stoop, but they could not possibly hear the crying of a sick child."

"Now, for today, would you consider a dollar and change too much? Need I add that I begged her to return the following day?

"When my husband came home he said at once: "You look fifty per cent better!" On going into the kitchen to prepare something to eat, he returned to the room. "Well, say, she's a brick!" Then he explained that the contrast between his return that night and the night before was so vivid that he had to tell me about it before he did a thing. The night before—newspapers hither and yon; table and sink full of dirty dishes and nothing to eat.

"Compared with prepared broth for the invalid in a double boiler with a little note beside it telling just what to do. She had also cooked and placed mashed potatoes in another double boiler, ready to reheat; the tomatoes were peeled and placed on the lettuce, and the chops on the tea.

"She came to me for four consecutive days, and believe me, that four dollars and forty cents brought me more comfort, contentment and happiness than I ever got out of a similar sum in all my life.

"As an ending I might say that I think this is a splendid idea for any girl to carry out. We need thousands like this."

May I add that the position of "Herrin" should surely be attractive, not only to the girl who wants a profession that is not overcrowded, but to the girl who would like to feel that she is combining social service with bread-winning?

GREAT ENTHUSIASM AMONG BOY SCOUTS

BOTH OFFICERS AND BOYS MUCH ENCOURAGED BY THE FINE WORK DONE TUESDAY.

MUCH GOOD WORK DONE

Many Merit Marks Have Been Earned By the Boys, and Also Many Minor Evils Corrected By Rules.

At no time since their inception in this city, a few weeks ago, has there been any more enthusiasm shown by the boys who are members of the Boy Scouts, and by their leaders than there is at the present time. The boys feel that they have shown the Janeville people what they can do, and what they have done so far, and the cordial greeting given their success has encouraged them to fresh efforts. Since almost half of the seventy boys have received their official scout suits, they have felt more like an organized body and have been more in earnest than ever. The boys may well be proud of their new suits for the plain, neat, business-like uniforms make a very pleasing appearance.

BOY SCOUTS AS THEY APPEARED IN THE MILITARY PARADE LAST TUESDAY.

The enrollment of new boys in the organization is steadily going on and every boy, who has joined, tells to others not in the scouts; and as far as can be learned most of the boys already have others whom they are preparing to take the tests required before a boy can become a tenderfoot or member of the lowest class.

The effect of membership on the boys has already been apparent among the boys, for they are all striving among themselves for the merit marks, which are given for good deeds reported by some one else than the boy doing them. Many of these marks have already been given, and the number of kind little acts reported is astonishing. However, merit marks are not the only ones that the boys have to look for, but there are demerit marks in store for them also, if any violation of the scout code, or scout honor is reported. The punishment for too flagrant violation or for too many such marks is, of course, dismissed from the scouts and loss of the suit.

The boys are drilling steadily and under the excellent instruction of Capt. Jackie are making fine progress. Their order and carriage in the Fourth of July parade, was easily the equal of that of the troops who marched and the boys received many compliments from the soldiers themselves, who were quite struck by the exhibition put up by the boys.

When the staves which the boys carry instead of guns, arrive, the boys will be given drills with them and will be taught various exercises. As the scout movement is not military, these staves are used instead of guns and the boys will be taught to use them effectively in self-defense in case of necessity, but only in that extreme.

The good effect of scout law is shown by a case spoken of by one of the officers of the movement, who found a boy in uniform preparing to smoke a cigarette, on the afternoon of the Fourth. The gentleman reminded the boy of the scout oath and readily obtained a promise to refrain from smoking. This is only one of the cases of good done by the scout movement.

In the cut accompanying this article the scouts are seen crossing the Milwaukee street bridge. In it one can see very well the perfect order preserved by the boys as they marched. The scouts who marched in the parade were: Rush Arg, James Dixon, Arthur Nobes, Sydney Miller, Jerome Riger, Nicholas Homsey, Hallot Day, Harry Fuchs, Stanley Baker, Leo Beard, Malcolm McDermott, Joseph Gagen, Morton Miller, Edward Jones, Cuthbert Hudon, Charles Main, Joseph Bubley, Walter Williams, Eugene Hill, Ross Lowry, Arthur Welch, Harold Laughlin, Will Ferin, Thornton DeCosta, Theodore Davoy, Herbert Kaukuk, Alfred Heise, Paul Loddie, Harold Jaery, Raymond Leifer, and Earle Spaulding. The boys were led by Capt. Jackie.

SPECIAL ORDERS TO JANESEVILLE SCOUTS BY LOCAL COUNCIL

Scout Commissioner Reeder Formulates Special Rules for the Janeville Scouts' Regulation.

Although the National order of Boy Scouts has rules by which the boys are to regulate their behavior, many of them are rather indefinite, and there is danger that they may be interpreted too freely, in order to avoid any such difficulty as this, Secretary Reeder of the local council has prepared a set of rules for the organization in this city. These rules, it will be understood, are purely local, but are nevertheless fully binding upon any Janeville scouts. They are as follows:

1. Be prepared. 2. No Boy Scout will be permitted to make, buy, sell or smoke any cigarette or to have in his possession any cigarettes, tobacco, or cigarette papers on penalty of instantaneous expulsion from his troop or patrol by the acting chief commissioner of the local council.

3. No Boy Scout can be excused for entering or frequenting any saloon or other place where intoxicating liquors are sold, except in cases of urgent necessity or great danger, where the services of the scout are necessary to save life or property—violation of this order by any Scout being cause for expulsion by any Scout being cause for expulsion.

4. No boy can be a member of the Scouts and use vile, blasphemous, or rough language at any time or place. Every Scout must be a gentleman when among gentlemen, as well as when among ladies.

5. Every Scout shall keep his clothes neat, his body clean, his hair combed, his shoes shined or as clean as possible and a smile on his face; the evidence of these virtues will be cause for promotion.

6. Special merit marks will be given for close observance of Scout laws and use of the Scout badge. Merit marks will be given to those who fail to observe them.

7. Every Scout must remember that when he wears his Scout suit he is shamed by everybody as an exemplary young man. He must remember that when he wears the Scout badge he must live up to the Scout law and obey the special order of the local council, and that any act which he may do when wearing that suit or badge that would be a shame on himself will also be a shame on the whole troop.

The local council also wishes to impress upon the Scouts that they as such cannot stand back of the Boy Scouts in all their work as such. That any boy who has a just complaint to make of any wrong or anything done to him or his fellow Scouts may report the same to the commissioner and in investigation will be made and remedy obtained for the boy. If possible. The local council will always see that the Boy Scouts have their rights. Remember Scout law number one, and the local council will see that you suffer no wrong.

All Boy Scouts should pay their monthly dues for July as soon as possible either to the secretary or the treasurer, and all boys whistling members should leave their orders with the secretary at once as the manuals will be ready for distribution about July 11th.

All new prospective members should report to the secretary at once as soon as new patrols are being formed and wish to join in a body. Order your suit early as it takes several days to get them from the factory.

Yours truly,

C. W. REEDER,
Chief Scout Commissioner.

The Scouts which have been enrolled so far have been divided into two troops, one on each side of the

PUSHING MOVEMENT FOR THE CONCERTS

Subscription List Started for Band Concerts in the City During the Rest of the Summer.

With the success of the musical features of the recent celebration, in which half a dozen bands participated, a movement is on foot to secure band concerts for Janeville during the week throughout the rest of the summer. Especially enjoyable to the local people during the three days of the fair, carnival was the music of the Bower City band. The band was recently reorganized and under the new regime is enjoying success. Band concerts in the past have met with favor among the citizens of Janeville and the movement is one that should be furthered. In other cities considerable enthusiasm in this direction is shown and if Janeville cannot lead it would be well to at least follow the lead of others.

While the move to secure the band concerts has just started, the merchants seem to be taking the matter up and it is hoped the cause will be successful.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—It is ever thus, when you are in line for good things, you have to pass them up.

BRITZ'S HEADQUARTERS

BY MARCIN BARBIE
ILLUSTRATIONS BY ROY

A writhing, twisting snake was the result. The cobra coiled and uncoiled with electric rapidity, traveling in circles all over the space between the chifferonier and the table whence Britz had lassoed the pistol. Plainly the reptile was hit—mortally wounded, he thought, but as he started to descend impatiently, Fitch seized him, and literally flung him back on the chifferonier's smooth top.

"Not yet," said the doctor, nervously. "Let's wait a minute."

It was profitable patience. For after probably a minute of terrible struggle, the cobra returned to its coil and once more reared its head. The gray body thrashed fiercely, but closer scrutiny showed the man the snake had not been hit with fatal result. Suddenly the physician seized Britz' arm in a nervous grasp.

"By Jupiter!" he exclaimed. "You've shot out its tongue!"

True enough. The fifth bullet had passed between the gaping jaws of the reptile and taken on the greater part of that darling scarlet thread as neatly as a sharp instrument could snip a candle. While the wound doubtless caused agony to the snake, it did not lessen its anger. The poison-charged fangs remained in its mouth, and the cutting off of its tongue swelled its fury to the ultimate degree.

Britz dropped the pistol on the chifferonier and thrust both hands in his pockets.

"Up a tree for fair," he said. "Nothing more doing in the artillery line."

"That was your last cartridge?"

Britz beat his head, affirmatively. An expression of slow wrath gathered force in the Headquarters man's face, as he stared at the awyng serpent such a short distance below. One could see he was angry enough to take the desperate chance of springing from his perch and trying to strike the cobra with his heels, or, failing that, seizing it by the neck, seeking to throttle it. The instinct of self-preservation, however, was stronger than rage. Britz was willing enough to risk his life in the fulfilling of his duty, so long as the risk meant a fighting chance to him. He was too sensible absolutely to throw his life away, and something told him that in spite of all the courage in the world, no man would have an appreciable percentage of opportunity in a battle at close quarters with so venomous a serpent. Yet he must get out of that house. He felt he was the only man on the police force who could be sure of heading off the Orientals. In that very moment they might be beyond the city's limits, bearing the booty he had pursued for weeks. It was more than his self-policing could stand. He gave rein to his anger, and for the first time in all the doctor's acquaintance with him he swore hard and fast and long. His now of profanity stopped as suddenly as it had commenced. He drew one hand from his pocket, and slowly, as if he hardly dared to trust his memory, held up his fingers and looked at what they clasped. Then he held the object out triumphantly for the physician to see. It was a loaded cartridge forgotten when last he emptied his pockets of their supply of extra ammunition!

"We'll make no misa with this one," said the slouth. "Don't you think you can use it better, doc?"

"No," said Fitch, "I am not in your class when it comes to snuffing out serpents' tongues. You may live when you are ready, Lieutenant."

Britz grinned, shook the empty shells out of the revolver, slipped the full cartridge into one of the chambers and twirled it until it punctured the barrel. Then, once more using his arm as a rest, he took careful aim, and was about to pull the trigger, when the door was flung open and the uniformed policeman stood on the threshold.

"Well," said the bluecoat, "excuse me for butting in, but I thought something might have—"

Fitch checked him with an upraised hand, and the policeman's eyes almost burst in their sockets as, lowering his gaze, he saw the up-reaching hand covered by the Headquarters man's pistol. For a second's space, none of the three men moved. Then a metallic click 'broke' the suspense, only to leave it in another instant more taut than ever as all three realized the cartridge had missed fire. The bluecoat's hand reached for his club. Panic-stricken though he had been at first sight of the cobra, he had the pluck common to the humblest member of "the finest," and he plainly meditated taking the serpent from the rear. He would not trust to his revolver, lest his aim, spoiled by the intensity of the situation, should fly high and hit one of the two refugees atop the chifferonier. But Britz saved the patrolman from what would undoubtedly have been a foolhardy act of courage. Instantly breaking his revolver open, he made a swift examination of the cartridge, saw that its rim was not dented by the hammer, and, concluding an accident for which the shell was not to blame had prevented an explosion, set the chamber once more, and fired again.

This time a crack followed. The great cobra shot into the air, and then fell squirming to the floor. Its coils unbroken as at full length it writhed in its death agony. Britz leaped to the far side of the table, seized a heavy book and buried it on the serpent's head. Then soon ended the reptile's struggles; but the doctor, brave enough under ordinary conditions, was not content until with a dagger-like paper cutter he snatched from the table he severed the snake's head from its twisting body.

He waited until she was close to the heartthrob before he turned, and said with a profound bow:

"Madam, my intrusion is excused by the fact that I can restore your jewels."

"Is it possible?" she exclaimed.

"It is more than possible. It is a fact accomplished," he answered. Taking from an inner pocket a package in silk tissue, he extended it toward her with the words:

"You will find in this parcel, madam, all the diamonds of your necklace, with the exception of the largest—the Maharanee."

"But the big diamond of the whole necklace—the Maharanee!" cried Mrs. Missioner. "How did you find these and not find that?"

"I have not said that I did not recover it," said the Swami. "On the contrary, I confess to you that I gained possession of the Maharanee at the time when I got these; but it must not, cannot be restored to you."

"I am grateful for what you have done," the widow said gently; "but I am unable to understand your attitude in regard to the missing stone. Why should I not have that, too? It is mine."

"Madam," said the Oriental, in the courtliest way, "I would not for the world say anything to disturb your faith in your husband. There is no need of doing so. Your faith is warranted. Mr. Missioner, when he said that, thought he was telling the truth. Unfortunately for you, as well as for many others, he was not speaking the truth. The renegade who sold that jewel to your husband did not buy it from anyone. He stole it!"

"Steal it!" the widow cried, with a little wail in her voice. "Impossible!"

"Pardon me once more, madam. It is so far from being impossible that it is the strict truth. Nor was the theft the only crime of which the man was guilty. In stealing that jewel, he committed a dreadful sacrifice."

Mrs. Missioner was so overcome by her emotions that she was obliged, in spite of her intention, to sit down, and therefore to extend to her visitor an invitation to be seated also, before she could get herself well enough in hand to follow the Swami's narrative calmly.

"That diamond," continued the sage, "once blazed in the forehead of the great Buddha, in the Temple of Delhi. It was revered by thousands, hundreds of thousands, by millions, as the most sacred work of the god; for tradition says it was the undisputed property of Buddha himself when he walked the earth in his latent incarnation."

Mrs. Missioner's lips were parted. Her eyes were fixed upon the Oriental in the intensity of her interest.

"One night," the sage went on, "when a band of militant priests assigned to guard the shrine of Buddha in the great Delhi temple relaxed its vigilance, a sacrilegious wretch—on whose head be all the curses of all the centuries!—made his way into the heart of the sacred building, and wrested the diamond from the brow of the god. That he was not blighted in his tracks by the lightning of divine wrath proves that the mind of the god at that moment was shrouded in meditation for the benefit of his children. The stone was missed at dawn. Within the hour, armed men were scouring the city for the apostate thief. No trace of him was found. The Maharanee of that kingdom, though he had been in certain observances of the faith, was too true a son of the Temple to let the careless priests go unpunished. By his order they were seized, a hundred of them, and thrown into prison. A royal decree was promulgated, the effect of which is that none of those unhappy captives is to see the light of day until the diamond is returned to its place in Buddha's forehead. The temple was draped in the mourning colors of the east, and those colors still deck its lonely walls. No true believer's foot may be seen within its portals while the great stone is missing. The brethren of the priesthood languish in dungeons, hoping against hope that Buddha may manifest his mercy by causing the gem to be regained and replaced upon his brow. Untended, unshorn, the god sits upon his throne within the shrine, waiting for the restoration of his own."

Uncomplimentary Comparison.

A Philadelphia school director is mostly bald, and one of his sons took advantage of the fact to make plain to his teacher his understanding of geography. The teacher had defined a desert as a barren tract, and in order to impress the pupil with it had asked them to define it and give an example.

When the school director's boy was questioned, he answered promptly and correctly, and by way of illustration said: "A desert is a great big tract that's barren, like pa's head an inch above his ears."

The Eternal Now.

Man and His Opportunities.

Innumerable men and women had to do human service. The man finds

The Man and His Book.

HONEST MEDICINES VERSUS

FAKES.

President Taft's recent message

suggesting an amendment to the Pure

Food and Drugs law in its relation to Prepared Medicines, does not refer to such standard medicines as Fole's

Honey and Tar Compound and Fole's

Kidney Pills, both of which are true medicines carefully compounded of ingredients and by the medical profession itself as the best known remedial agents for the diseases they are intended to cure. For over three decades Fole's Honey and Tar

Compound has been a standard remedy for coughs, colds and afflictions of the throat, chest and lungs for children and for grown persons, and it retains today its pre-eminence above all other preparations of its kind. Fole's Kidney Pills are equally effective and meritorious.—Badger Drug Co.
